

SIGHT MOLLISON PLANE FLYING OVER HALIFAX

Ship Was Flying Low But Fast and Markings Were Not Seen

HEADED FOR NEW YORK

Almost Perfect Flying Weather Along the Route is Reported

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Aug. 19.—A small plane thought to be that of Captain J. A. Mollison, flew over Halifax at 5.45 E. D. T. The plane was flying very low but at a rapid rate and was headed in the direction of New York. The markings could not be seen by those who sighted the plane.

NEWFOUNDLAND, Aug. 19.—(INS).—Almost perfect flying weather this morning awaited Capt. James A. Mollison, Scottish flyer, due here to complete a trans-Atlantic flight from Ireland and the first lap of a projected round trip to New York.

Following a perfect night of moonlight and calm, dawn broke with conditions still favorable. There was a very light southwest wind, visibility was good, and the ceiling was about 1500 feet up.

It was believed possible that Mollison, who was due here some time between 6.30 and 10.30 a. m., e. d. t., may have encountered storms during the night over the Atlantic.

Weather experts declared that although conditions were good when he began the hazardous crossing in the smallest plane yet to attempt it, they later changed with delaying headwinds possible along his route.

Mollison left Portmarnock, near Dublin, at 11.35 a. m. (6.35 a. m., e. d. t.), yesterday. He intended to stop here briefly for refueling, and then hurry on to New York, where he planned a short rest, a quick overhauling of his plane, and a return dash back across the Atlantic to London.

He was sighted twice after his take-off, once over Galway, off the west coast of Ireland, and later by the Cunard liner Ascania about 650 miles out. It was not likely that he would be seen by ships during the night, although it was possible, since he headed over the regular North Atlantic shipping route.

Mollison carried 165 gallons of gasoline, which he calculated to be enough for about 33 hours flying. He expected to complete the 1900 miles to Harbor Grace in 24 hours or a little more. His plane had a cruising speed of 110 miles an hour and a maximum of about 130. He carried no wireless, sacrificed at the last minute to save weight.

Only 26, the young flyer already holds two important air records, the England to Australia record of eight days, 21 hours and 25 minutes, and the England to Capetown, South Africa, mark of four days, 17 hours and 24 minutes.

In Roosevelt's Hands

Here is an unusual view of New York's City Hall, the fate of which is bound up with the present Walker-Seabury hearing before Governor Roosevelt. Rumors have circulated to the effect that Mayor Walker (upper right) may resign before the Governor announces his decision in the case. In such event the Mayor could stand for re-election next November. But if ousted by the Governor, Walker would be succeeded by the President of the Board of Aldermen, Joseph V. McKee (left), who would serve out the Mayor's unexpired term. Mayor Walker denied he has any intention of quitting under fire.

THIS WILL GET YOUR NUMBER

Bristol Township,
August 16, 1932.

Dear Stroller:
It is not our province to tell these things, but being a stranger in your town, and reading of the wonderful cellophane snake story you had in your issue of the 6th, I ask as a matter of fair play to an outsider, that you publish this.

In our part of the country, Bristol Township, we possess a snake of the Wringer-Hollywood type. We learn that the first part of its name was obtained from the word "wringer." This reptile, which was the forerunner of the "Block-Aid" system, starts out every Monday morning. Each snake covers one block in its work. When a woman gets through washing clothes the snake takes them from her and by "tightening-up" wrings all the water out of the wash—ready for the lady to hang on the line.

Now the Hollywood name, I am rather modest about telling this part, but your cellophane snake that ours wants an even break.

This snake gets its name from a film which it sheds from its eyes every 24 hours. As this film is developed it shows its true worth. It has been taught to climb a traffic pole, but for a very particular purpose. This eye-film takes an accurate picture of all cars which pass the red light. It also records the license number of the car, the condition of the driver, whether he has both hands on the wheel, etc. These pictures are preserved by the police for records against the drivers, and the owner of one of these snakes has paid off the mortgage on his property by sharing in the proceeds of the fines collected.

Sincerely yours,
A. THURINGER.

PERKASIE WOMAN DIES AT AGE OF 93 YEARS

Mrs. Hannah Cassel Fretz
Succumbs After Six Months' Illness

OTHER COUNTY NOTES

Perkasie lost its oldest resident in the death of Mrs. Hannah Cassel Fretz. Mrs. Fretz was ninety-three years of age.

Death came after a gradual decline over the past six months. For two weeks she has been unconscious at the home of her son-in-law, Rev. A. M. Fretz, at Fifth and Buttonwood streets, Perkasie. Rev. Fretz is pastor emeritus of Grace Mennonite Church of Lansdale.

Until her health began to fail suddenly early in the spring, Mrs. Fretz was in perfect health, in possession of all her faculties, and even assisting her daughter in doing some of the lighter tasks of the household.

She had been living in Perkasie for the past seven years, going to live with her daughter in 1925. Previous to that time she had been living with her son in the Trumbauersville section, and she was a resident of that part of Bucks county for the greater part of her life.

Surviving are the two children: Mrs. A. M. Fretz, with whom she lived, and Clinton Fretz, of Trumbauersville. Her husband, the late Joseph M. Fretz, preceded her in death fifteen years ago.

The funeral will be held on Monday.

The third annual reunion of the John Yeager family, well known in Bucks County, met on Sunday at Community Park, near Fogelsville, with sixty members present.

Officers who were re-elected included: Norman R. Yeager, Newtown, president; Margaret Schaffer, Downingtown, vice-president; Gordon Walters, Royersford, secretary. Paul Bergstresser, Royersford, treasurer.

WILLIAM PENN FIRE CO. HAS SERVED 100 YEARS

"Little 'Billy' Penn," Hand
Pumper, Can Still Play
A Stream

NOSPECIAL OBSERVANCE

HULMEVILLE, Aug. 19.—This month marks the 100th anniversary of William Penn Fire Company of this borough, said organization having its inception in August of the year 1832. Although no official affair is to mark the century of service to the community and outlying sections, the members have noted the anniversary in their business meetings, and many of the "old-timers" are letting their memories take them back to years ago when fires were fought in an entirely different manner from that of today.

The company is particularly proud of the "Little 'Billy' Penn," the hand-pumper "fire engine" which has been in the company's hands for 95 years. Organized in 1832, the William Penn Company secured this little piece of apparatus five years later, or in 1837.

The "Little 'Billy' Penn" was successfully tried out here several weeks ago, and proved its ability to still "shoot" a good stream. The old-fashioned piece has a compartment for water, comparatively small when considered alongside the modern apparatus. A handle on either side was grasped in the old days by the firemen, who proceeded to turn such around, thus forcing the water through the hose. The little engine was pulled by a number of men in the days when it was used.

The miniature engine is the same type as the "Dorby Ram" engine, which style is over 150 years old. There are but few of either remaining in the United States.

The William Penn Company years ago housed the pieces of apparatus in the town hall on Trenton avenue, but in 1912 removed to the new fire station on Green street.

Present equipment of this 100-year-old company includes: Childs 500 gallon pumper, and Ford 200 gallon pumper.

Present officers are: President, Cyrus E. Smith; vice-president, Edward Bilger; recording secretary, Lester Spill; financial secretary, W. J. Keen; treasurer, William Vansant; chief, Thomas K. Schatt; chief chauffeur, Herbert Claus; trustees, Joseph Canby, Edward Davis, Edward Bilger; Howard Black; William L. Stackhouse.

The company has its building free of debt, and is nearly free of encumbrance on the apparatus.

BABY ABANDONED

WALTHAM, MASS.—(INS).—Since a baby boy was found abandoned after a baby show, the State Department of Public Welfare has had offers from ten persons to adopt the baby. Because of a statute requiring that abandoned children be held by the state for two years, however, officials were forced to turn down all the offers, and place the baby in a boarding home while they tried to find his parents.

LAMB CROP DECLINES

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—(INS).—The poor range and feed situation prevailing in Wyoming last fall and winter was responsible for an 11 per cent decline in the 1932 lamb crop, according to Arnold J. King, state-federal crop and livestock statistician here. King's figures show that 2,178,000 lambs were docked in Wyoming this year, as compared with 2,448,000 in 1931.

RISE IN TIDE

Not everybody sees the current bull market as a bubble destined to a speedy bursting, least of all the stock brokers. And if anybody is qualified to estimate the life of this market trend it is the man through whom shares are bought and sold.

The best proof that the brokers themselves are bullish is the prices they are paying for stock exchange seats. In a single day the price jumped from $30,000 to $420,000.

The upturn was not based alone on the rising number of shares changing hands. It reflects what those who follow the long-term movements of securities are thinking about the future. And they are thinking nice things about it.

Brokers can only guess but when they are willing to gamble $120,000 on their guesses they are anything but pessimistic. Either they have inside information or are careful students of investor psychology. In any event they are most optimistic at this moment and that is a good sign.

Confidence is returning on a tidal wave. First commodity prices start jumping high hurdles. Then small investors by the thousands muster up enough courage to rush back into the securities market and clean up. And now the brokers, who still insisted after the market began to soar that it was impossible, furnish another sign of the times by bidding exchange seats to the skies.

OLD HEROES FORGOTTEN

Surely young Americans have taken new heroes for old when an old Indian fighter laments that nobody wants to hear about Indians any more.

Perhaps the redskins are forgotten because the traditional Indian lives only in legend and pictures. Oil royalties and reservation provisions have replaced the bow and arrow as his means of subsistence. The cayuse he has traded for a gas buggy. Even the language is dying.

Indeed, the old heroes are passing. Babe Ruth and Lindbergh are crowding Buffalo Bill and Daniel Boone out of their niches. Young America follows Admiral Byrd to the Antarctic instead of Lewis and Clark into the wilderness of the West. And when the "sharp crack" of a pistol rings out nowadays it is another gangster—and not a redskin—who bites the dust.

Styles in heroes change even as modes of living. And no harm is done by the change, for youth invests his heroes and heroines with sterling qualities and the highest ideals no matter how they win their fame. The important thing is that the younger generation has its heroes.

In the position of the lost explorer who had only ants and locusts to eat we wouldn't choose to chew.

That foolproof airplane Italy announces probably has the cabin doors locked both inside and out.

South America might be making a better showing in the Olympic foot races had she sent her deposed presidents.

Both parties might take a tip from the liner Manhattan when smokestacks are being heightened 15 feet to carry off the gasses.

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY GUYTON-PRIDE, INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Lola Carewe, "The Night Club Lady", and her guest, Christine Quires, are mysteriously murdered in the former's apartment. Scorpions were the instruments of death. The police suspect Guy Everett, the last person to see Christine alive. Lola had blackmailed Everett. He, however, claims that Christine discovered a plot to kill Lola and feared for her own life because of her knowledge. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt learns that a young Paris bank clerk, named Basil Boucher, loved Lola. After robbing a bank to buy her a ruby, Basil disappeared. His parents sold medical laboratory specimens. Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, became hysterical at the mention of Basil, calling her daughter a beast and saying Lola never loved him. Edward Quires, Christine's brother, left his Rochester home for New York following the receipt of a telegram the day of the murders. Christine was to have inherited wealth shortly. Suspicion also points to Dr. Hugh Baldwin when it is disclosed that he purchased scorpions. He had stated heart failure caused the deaths. Colt, talking to question Baldwin, finds him dead—from a scorpion bite! Mrs. Baldwin reveals that she knew her husband was involved with Lola. A search of the physician's desk is made.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

COLT was opening drawer after drawer without finding a shred, not a scrap, of any intimate, personal data. There remained but two drawers yet to go, when I heard Colt give a low exclamation of triumphant surprise.

"Look, Tony!" he called. "Look what we have found here!" The Commissioner was holding up an envelope, long and white and sealed, across the face of which was written in bold black strokes: "Statement of Hugh Baldwin, M.D. To be opened only if and when he dies suddenly or mysteriously."

Colt handled that envelope with the greatest care. He realized that here in his hand might lie an explanation of three tragedies.

On the other hand, it might be nothing of the kind. Often enough, fraudulent statements cleverly forged have been left near dead bodies, to make death appear self-inflicted. In such cases the very sealing of the envelope may hold a fragile and yet most valuable clue. Thus Colt treated this sealed document with almost reverential respect.

He carried it over to the window and held it up to the light. Through the rather flimsy linen paper of the envelope, he could make out some of the written characters within. Then with the blade of a pocket knife, he began to work loose the lower flaps of the envelope—the parts that are sealed in the factory—leaving the flap which the writer had pasted down untouched for further examination.

Now he drew forth from the envelope a sheaf of papers, written across in bold lettering with a heavy black pencil, in a strongly characteristic hand. We sat down and read the statement together: "I am leaving this memorandum because I fully realize that I may be put out of the way by my enemies—or that I may yet decide to end my own worthless life. In either case, I want the truth to be known. I say my enemies, but I should say Christine Quires and Lola Carewe. I do not intend to lose my life at the whim of these two vampires in human form or go out without leaving behind me the evidence that shall revenge my murder. And it is likely that if I do go suddenly and violently, it will be murder."

"The facts of my relationship with these two women are simple and direct enough. I was the physician for Mr. Gifford, the husband of Lola Carewe. Mr. Gifford was not a very ill man at the time of his marriage. He suffered from indigestion and I treated him for this with a simple remedy. But upon one occasion, I wrote a prescription and through some incalculable fragment of circumstance which deflected my attention at the time I was writing the prescription, I wrote down an ingredient which I had no intention of ordering. The combination which I had prescribed resulted therefore in a poisonous dose. The fact is that I, his trusted physician, killed Mr. Gifford.

"Of course, I did not intend to kill him. But he did die solely as a result of my carelessness. When I realized what had happened, I was struck dumb with horror. I had always been an honorable practitioner. I have often heard the joke that doctors bury their mistakes. I know that honorable doctors do nothing of the kind. I went directly to the widow, whom the world now knows as Lola Carewe, and told her what I had done. She took pity on me with what seemed to me then a great compassion. She told me that she could find it in the heart to forgive and forget, but that she felt in justice to herself I should write out a statement and give it to her."

"This I did. I thought the matter was over. The door was closed on that incident and I breathed freely. In a little while, it was to me as if it had never happened. But how wrong I was! Suddenly I had to open that door in my life again. For Lola Carewe now began to take advantage of my position to hold over me a power that practically made me her slave. She made me invest my savings in her worthless schemes. And worse than that she had me do!

"At the time her husband died, I had the moral courage to face the world and acknowledge my mistake. I could have begun life all over again—if not in my profession, then in some other work where new success did not depend upon the trust of people who would commit their safety, their very lives, to my hands. In the exaltation of my remorse I could have given up being a doctor and started life anew. But now that inspired mood had passed. I had been forgiven. I did not have the courage to defy Lola when she made these demands on me. Now my career, my profession, my work, had become dearer to me than anything else. I am a good physician and I am proud of my record in spite of that one fatal mistake. But I have been a weak tool in this woman's hands."

"It was thus that I came to know the real mystery of Lola Carewe. I was one of the few men in New York who ever knew the truth about her. Of course I did not know all. Probably no one but Lola could claim that sinister distinction. But I knew enough to understand the amazing practices which she introduced into New York. I learned how Lola kept herself unceasingly in funds, although she was notoriously one of the most extravagant women in New York."

"Lola Carewe was a blackmail. That was the only card she knew how to play. She would not gamble or steal, and I do not believe she had it in her heart to love any man. No other crime interested her except extortion. In that grisly and awful business she seemed to take an unholy pleasure. From this came her money, in a secret, underground river of gold. The number of men and women in New York City who have paid tribute to this blackmailing beauty would astonish the rest of the town."

"Lola introduced no fancy sleights of her own into her blackmailing schemes. She used the time-worn methods. She first led her victim into some vicious practice or pursuit, got overwhelming evidence, and then bled him for the rest of his life. It is a game played as old as the Bible courtesans. There is nothing new in it. But it continues to be terribly effective."

"How, then, did I fit in to such a picture? How could I help her in her infamous conduct? The answer is simple and horrible—I provided drugs for her friends. She seduced and made them everlasting victims of cocaine, morphine, hashish, and opium. She generally began with the use of marihuana cigarettes. I provided the drugs. I was in her power—the only power that she understood or cared to use—and she blackmailed me into giving her victims the drugs they demanded. Later, she did not care whether I gave them the drugs or not—all that she wanted, then, was tribute money. If it were not forthcoming, wife or husband was betrayed, homes wrecked—it was seldom that her levy was not paid on time."

KOENIG BATS WAY BACK TO BIG LEAGUE

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—(INS).—When the Chicago Cubs bought Mark Koenig recently the former American League shortstop achieved a goal he set for himself a few months back.

Let out by the Detroit Tigers to the San Francisco Missions early this season Koenig opened a campaign that eventually carried him back to the major leagues.

Loss of his batting eye and a falling off in his work in the field started Mark on the road that led from the Yankees to the Tigers and finally to the minor leagues. A successful operation restored his batting eye and he then proceeded to blast his way back to the big leagues.

It was a foregone conclusion on the Coast that Mark would be traded or sold back to one of the big teams this winter. The Cubs didn't wait that long and Mark is back for the second time.

Out on the Coast Mark had been clipping the apple for a percentage of about .377 which was second only to that of Oscar Eckhardt, former Boston Braves, who was leading the league with .421.

Koenig jumped from the St. Paul club, of the American Association, to the New York Yankees in 1925 and was an immediate success. During his stay with the Yankees until the season of 1930 when he was traded to the Tigers, Mark was an important cog in the Yankees' infield.

Mark's eyes began to bother him the last season he played with the New York club and his batting and general playing fell off. With the Tigers the trouble persisted and Harris shipped him to the Coast.

Make New Lawns Now, Is Advice of Authorities

There are two good seasons in which to sow grass seed, authorities say. One is late August and early September. The other is early spring as soon as the frost is out of the ground and the soil is dry enough to be worked.

Fall seeding, however, has several advantages over spring seeding, particularly in the northern half of the United States. Weather is more favorable to planting in the fall. Grass seed germinates more quickly and, with proper plant food, the grass will develop strong roots before winter comes and grow during the spring into a thick, beautiful turf.

Here is the method recommended by expert gardeners as the easiest, most economical method of making your new lawn now. Prepare the seed bed by spading or plowing; then cultivate the ground into a pulverized surface, free of lumps. Before planting the seed, rake lightly but thoroughly into the soil four pounds of complete plant food to every hundred square feet. Then sow good grass seed of a variety suitable for your community. Your local seed dealer's recommendation will be reliable as to the best mixture for you to use. Sow the seed evenly, then roll the surface lightly to bring the soil in contact with the seed. Water the soil frequently, using a fine spray until the grass is big enough to mow.

The amount of plant food you have applied will be sufficient to assure the grass in your lawn a square meal during the fall season. It will enable the grass to develop a strong root system before winter comes, the best insurance you can have against winter killing.

NEWS BRIEFS

WILKES-BARRE.—Herman L. Hier, of Harvey's Lake, was arrested by a game warden for catching three trout of less than legal size.

He told Judge B. R. Jones the trout measured six inches when he caught them but that they shrank while he was roaming the woods in search of woodchuck before meeting the game warden.

Judge Jones smiled at the plea of the fisherman and sentenced him to pay a fine of $10 for each fish.

Hier had the last laugh for he obtained his release on a defect in the commitment.

PITTSBURGH.—A pair of youthful magicians, hitch-hiking their way to the Olympic Games at Los Angeles, recently found their tricks sufficiently interesting to win a smile of approval and a "discharge" from a Pittsburgh police magistrate.

Israel Sarat and Francis Finneran, both of Fall River, Mass., were arrested at a downtown street corner when their demonstration attracted a cigarettes should a reduction in the crowd. They were arraigned before Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court.

Magistrate Jones, curious after having heard their testimony, asked for a demonstration—and got it. Cards floated mysteriously from hand to hand, objects from the court desk disappeared and came snapping back in to view. With a final grand flourish, the old napkin trick won the day, not to mention the magistrate's smile and the youths' dismissal.

BRACKENRIDGE.—The application of young women addicted to use of tobacco in any form whatsoever for positions on the Brackenridge school system teaching staff will be ignored, according to one member of the school directorate.

The decision, he declared, to accord no consideration to women smokers seeking teaching posts won approval at a recent board meeting. At the same time it was intimated that rebirth of Fall River, Mass., were arrested at a downtown street corner when their demonstration attracted a cigarettes should a reduction in the rank of the teachers become necessary.

tax (effective September 1 to February 28), to be used for direct and work relief.

Authorized increased borrowing and taxing powers for municipalities, including permission for Philadelphia and Pittsburgh to tax locally all items the State can but does not tax.

Approved $25,000,000 bond issue to reimburse municipalities for relief expenditures; $25,000,000 bond issue for emergency State expenses during 1933-35 biennium, and constitutional amendment to permit State to accept Federal aid all requiring approval of 1933 Legislature and electorate.

same place on the second Sunday in August.

Missing from his home for several hours, search for Charles Walp, aged sixty-nine, a retired farmer, was made by his family, who discovered his body hanging from a rafter in his barn shortly after noon.

His granddaughter, Emma Campbell, found the lifeless body of her grandfather, who, it is believed, took his life shortly after 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, previously telling his family he was going to his shop in his barn to repair shoes.

Mr. Walp was a native of the Richlandtown section and for many years engaged in farming. Coroner Dr. John J. Sweeney, M. D., Doylestown, viewed the body and gave a verdict of suicide.

Walp's survivors are his widow, nee Mary Leister; four daughters, Mrs. Milton Croman, Quakertown; Mrs. Paul Knechel, Shelly; Mrs. Clara Carbaugh, of near Brick Tavern and Mrs. Elsie Campbell, Richlandtown, and one son, Linford Walp, of Springtown.

Abram Lengel, of Hilltown, was released under $300 bail for action of Bucks County Court at a hearing before Magistrate Mahlon Keller, of Perkasie, when he was charged with desertion and non-support by his wife, Naomi. Bail was posted by Melvin Lengel.

Mrs. Lengel testified that her husband had forced her and their four children, Ralph, eleven, Marie, nine, Naomi, six, and Maude, nineteen month, from their home and then failed to provide her with money for support. She was represented by Attorney Robert Grimm and Mark Thatcher was attorney for the defense. The couple have been married fourteen years.
